Pasco County
Supervisor of Elections

The holidays have now passed and the November election already seems far behind us. We can all be proud of how Florida conducted elections this cycle with a stellar performance that may have renewed the nation's confidence in the electoral process. Pasco County was no exception. We were the first in the state to report the results of our 73.74% turnout just shortly past 9:00 p.m.

Looking ahead, January 2009 denotes the beginning of a new presidency and my own "swearing in" as the newly elected Supervisor of Elections for Pasco County on January 6. We have already begun preparations for the 5 potential Municipal Elections to be held in April.

In the meantime, we will reflect on the past year and plan for improvements while we await the outcome of the legislative session this spring and more changes that may come our way. We will continue our work in voter education and outreach through our attendance at community events and programs. We will reestablish our New Resident Program in which we contact new county residents with elections and voter registration information, as well as our Vote in Honor of a Veteran program in the High Schools this spring. Information on our programs and our schedule of events are posted on our website, pascovotes.com.
